Anyone traveling by the city's main fire station, The Columbia Hose Co., will notice a gasoline pump standing outside the building on the Lackawanna River side.

Martin P. Judge, the city's managing director, told the Carbondale MIRROR last week that the pump is a second-hand one installed there recently for a very good purpose.

When the fire station was built several years ago, the city installed tanks for the starage of diesel fuel there.

The tanks have been filled, Judge said, and it wasn't until recently that the city was
